Community drop-in sessions in your neighbourhood

To meet the growing demand for more warm, dry homes, Kāinga Ora is redeveloping some of its older homes and working with developers to build new homes in your neighbourhood.

Increasing the number of homes will help to meet the urgent need for public housing in Tasman and means more families and individuals will have a warm, dry and healthy place to call home.

Who is Kāinga Ora?

Kāinga Ora is the largest provider of public housing in New Zealand. We provide homes to about 200,000 customers and their whanau. Kāinga Ora is also an urban development agency and builds and enables public, affordable and market housing.

Drop-in information session

Come along to our community drop-in session, where you can find out more about the new developments planned for Tasman, and what this means for you. We would love to hear your thoughts and ideas around how we can better support your community.

We will have staff available to talk about:

- How sites are identified for new housing.
- Our design, planning and construction processes.
- How we place people into homes and manage our housing.
- How we support customers to live well in their homes and community.
